Daughter is so lazy, she has a maid feed her, another turn the pages of the Action Story book and a butler watch her breathe. She is the despair of papa and mama who are unable to do a thing with her.

When she plays tennis, she sits on an easy chair, attended by a flock of maids and languorously returns the service of her apponent.

Bob Arlington, a young friend of her father's, arrives. He is attached to the Northwestern Mounted Police. He is quite shocked to see the girl's indifference and is given the shock of his young life a few days later when he tangles fish lines with her, dragging her across a lake up to his very feet.

Then, they purchase a trick flute which makes fish jump out of the water, from a small boy. On the way to his cabin they lose the fish. He shoots a few ducks. She picks up a skunk but drops it in time. A bear almost scares her to death.

Moonshiners capture Boh and wound him. Then they turn him lose on a horse. Daughter rescues him and goes out to get the gang, wearing his uniform. She succeeds, after a desperate single-handed battle and returns to marry him.

Father calls and gets the surprise of his old years when he finds out what has happened to his daughter. He is stunned again when he beholds her hubby, wearing an apron and washing the dishes.
